

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE ACTION ALLIANCE

Domestic Violence Resource Directory
12-15-2022

In mid-2019, several community and organizational leaders asked Erie Together, our region's countywide anti-poverty movement, to help stakeholders create a comprehensive domestic violence reduction strategy for Erie County. Participating stakeholders include law enforcement, the District Attorney, domestic violence agencies, higher education institutions, various social service agencies, legal service providers, immigrant services, public health, healthcare providers, and others. The group began meeting in August 2019 and is now known as the "Domestic Violence Action Alliance (DVAA)."

One of the tasks before the DVAA was to identify specific challenges associated with reducing domestic violence in Erie County, and ways to address those challenges. The group defines "domestic violence" as "the use of physical, emotional, psychological or sexual abuse or stalking to gain or maintain power and control over an intimate partner, former intimate partner, or family member whether they live together or not." One of the top challenges the group identified to reducing domestic violence was a need for improved interagency collaboration and communication to strengthen referrals and promote increasingly positive service outcomes.

An important piece of this is the following Resource Directory, created to make it easier for organizations to understand relevant services provided across Erie County, know how those services can be reached, and make effective referrals. The following pages reflect those services provided by participating DVAA members from which domestic violence victims and/or family members could benefit.

Special Message from SafeNet and Safe Journey, Pennsylvania Coalition Against Domestic Violence (PCADV) Members:

Victims of domestic violence in Erie County deserve the most comprehensive trauma-informed services possible. Lives are at stake. In 2018 Erie County reported nine domestic-violence-related homicides. None of those victims had received prior support for domestic violence to keep them safe. We believe those tragedies may have been prevented if those victims had received the appropriate services from professionals trained in the realities of domestic violence. Many more victims live in our communities whose lives are being destroyed — threatened — by violent abusers.

It's essential for the safety of victims and their families that the first referral for any victim of domestic violence in Erie County be to Safe Journey, which serves the rural county, or to SafeNet, which is based in the city of Erie. Together, Safe Journey and SafeNet have a combined 90 years of organizational experience dealing with all aspects of domestic violence. We are the experts in the field of domestic violence advocacy in Erie County.

Safe Journey and SafeNet have the highest level of confidentiality under statute 23 Pa. C.S.A. § 6101, the Protection from Abuse Act. This act provides for absolute confidentiality between a victim and a certified domestic violence agency to encourage open and honest dialogue and assure safety.

Safe Journey and SafeNet are member agencies of the Pennsylvania Coalition Against Domestic Violence (PCADV). As members of PCADV, both agencies are monitored for compliance with state policies and all staff are certified in domestic violence. We also have experienced legal representation, and staff members receive up-to-date training in domestic violence advocacy.

Within this directory are many agencies that provide valuable resources for Erie County residents. Safe Journey and SafeNet take full advantage of that expertise by making a minimum of eight referrals for each victim served.

The safety of victims must always be the first priority. Safe Journey and SafeNet provide comprehensive and holistic support for victims and network with other organizations to meet the many needs of victims.

Services SafeNet provides counseling, advocacy, community education, and emergency shelter.

Services are free and confidential and they are provided for all victims of Domestic Violence / Dating Violence / Intimate Partner Violence regardless of age, race, or gender. SafeNet serves individuals who are cisgender and LGBT.)

- Community and Professional Education (814-455-1774 ex. 238 or kswager@safeneterie.org)
SafeNet provides educational programs to organizations, agencies, schools, colleges, and community agencies.

Programs include, but are not limited to:

Intimate Partner Violence 101

This overview of IPV examines the dynamics of abusive relationships, types of abuse, red flags, long-term health effects, why some victims stay, and the services SafeNet offers to IPV victims.

Healthy vs. Unhealthy Relationships

Teens will learn the difference between healthy and unhealthy relationships. This training includes ways to recognize signs of abuse, prevention of date violence, bullying and cyberbullying, stalking, and how to ask for help.

IPV on Campus

One of the largest demographic for individuals experiencing physical, emotional, and sexual abuse in relationships is women aged 18-24. Learn the IPV risks prevalent on campus, healthy and unhealthy relationships, types of dating violence, red flags of abuse, bystander action, online safety, and stalking. Abuse/Neglect of Individuals Who Rely on the Care of Others When individuals must rely on the care of others to age or abilities, they are vulnerable to abuse. Their need for personal care becomes a barrier for disclosure and intervention. (Can be adapted for elder abuse or disability abuse.)

What Is Human Trafficking?

Examine definitions, statistics, and case studies of human trafficking as well as the effects of trauma, legal implications, and IPV services for victims. IPV Education and Prevention While IPV is caused by the abuser's need for power and control, there are steps that can help prevent it. Community outreach and education programs explore red flags of abuse, types of abuse, healthy and unhealthy relationships, safety planning, stalking, bullying, and bystander intervention.

LGBTQ: IPV Does Not Discriminate

With IPV rates similar to those in same sex relationships, LGBTQ+ victims often face additional barriers to reporting abuse, seeking medical attention, and accessing IPV services. Cultural Barriers to IPV Education and Intervention Language, culture, religious beliefs, legal status, and fear of deportation can affect a victim's decisions to seek medical care or IPV services. This training helps friends, neighbors, and coworkers remain sensitive to cultural factors while offering assistance and referrals. Recognizing Signs of Trauma IPV can result in diminished cognitive and emotional processing, erratic social behaviors, sleeping or eating disorders, and substance abuse. Instead of treating the behaviors alone, these conditions must be recognized as trauma and addressed with IPV counseling support and trauma-informed services.

When Home Isn't a Safe Place: Effects of IPV on Children

Children experience physical and emotional trauma from witnessing IPV in the home. These consequences can be long-term, affecting their success in school and their ability to form healthy relationships as adults. The High Cost of IPV IPV also carries a staggering price tag. Statistics document the high cost of IPV from financial abuse, medical care costs, lost wages, chronic health conditions, and the lasting effects on the next generation.

BARS in Bars

Alcohol doesn't cause IPV, yet there is a connection between alcohol/drug use and IPV. This training is aimed restaurant/bar staff so they can recognize signs, defuse situations, and provide referrals.

IPV in the Workplace The effects of IPV often follow the victim to work

Know the signs that a coworker or employee could be experiencing IPV and understand potential health, safety, productivity, supervisory, and financial implications. Workplace harassment and safety planning will also be discussed.

SafeNet's medical program provides outreach and training in hospitals, medical offices, and colleges and universities.

- Medical Outreach and Training (814-455-1774 ext. 238 or kswager@safeneterie.org)

Training programs include, but are not limited to the following:

Medical Advocacy: IPV Screening in Medical Settings

Healthcare providers play a vital role in starting the IPV conversation. IPV screenings in medical settings offer victims a safe place to reveal the abuse, which in turn helps providers make effective treatment decisions and referrals for IPV services. Screenings can save lives and relieve the trauma of children witnessing abuse at home. In addition to emergency medical facilities, practices with an increased likelihood of seeing IPV victims include OB-GYN, pediatric, primary care, mental health, dental, and orthopedic offices. When a victim screens positive for Domestic Violence / Dating Violence / Intimate Partner Violence in the medical setting SafeNet has counselor advocates on call 24/7 to meet with the victims in the medical setting. Victims are provided needs assessment, safety planning, and emergency referrals.

IPV and Traumatic Brain Injury, Strangulation, and Chronic Medical Conditions

IPV can result in traumatic brain injury, symptoms of oxygen deprivation, chronic muscular pain or digestive problems, substance abuse, gynecological problems, and mental health concerns, including PTSD.

Effects of IPV on the Elderly and People with Disabilities

When patients rely on the care of others due to limitations of age or physical/intellectual ability, they are vulnerable to abuse not only by partners but by family members and caregivers. They often fear disclosing abuse because of their reliance on assistance.

LGBTQ—IPV Does Not Discriminate

With IPV rates similar to those in same-sex relationships, LGBTQ+ victims often face additional barriers to reporting abuse, seeking medical attention, and accessing IPV services.

The Complex Emotional and Psychological Effects of IPV on Children

If children witness abuse at home, there is always more than one victim in the house. Without the support that helps build resiliency, children can carry the emotional, psychological, and physical effects of abuse well into adulthood. It can affect their future relationships and their success at parenting. SafeNet services can help.

IPV and Human Trafficking

You have likely treated victims of labor or sexual trafficking. Learn definitions, statistics, and case histories of human trafficking and the importance of referrals for IPV services.

IPV in the Workplace

The effects of IPV often follow victims to work. Recognize the signs that a coworker could be experiencing IPV and understand the potential health, safety, productivity, and financial implications. Workplace safety planning will also be discussed.

Services

Health & Wellness Program
814-452-3935
info@uscree.org

The Health & Wellness Program offers safe, free and confidential services for those affected by trauma and the resulting physical, psychological, social, and emotional impacts. Health & Wellness addresses the bio-psycho-social needs of the clients, understanding that empowering and supporting happy, healthy clients requires a holistic approach to their health and wellness needs. Health & Wellness helps survivors of domestic violence, human trafficking, and other forms of trauma. Our services include one-on-one counseling, intensive case management, and referral services to our community partners. Services are free of charge and regardless of immigration status

Eligibility: Connection to the refugee or immigration community: could be a refugee or immigrant, or the child of a refugee or immigrant.

Parenting Classes
814-452-3935
info@uscree.org

Our Parenting Classes are rooted in the understanding that parents are the central mechanism for building healthy families, which in turn build healthy communities. We know that every parent wants what is best for their child, but misinformation about child development, behavioral expectations, and how children learn impacts the way a person parents their child. Our Parenting Classes are designed to enlighten and empower parents to make healthy, appropriate decisions in how they raise their children, so our communities can grow stronger together.

Eligibility: Immigrant or Refugee

Refugee Social Services Program

info@uscree-erie.org

USCRI Erie's RSS Program is designed to serve refugees who have lived in the US for under 60 months and struggle to find or maintain employment due to barriers such as childcare, transportation, English proficiency, or other special needs. The RSS program is aimed at empowering clients to become self-sufficient and fully integrated into their community.

Eligibility: Refugee; struggling to find employment; in the United States under 5 years (with some flexibility)

Cultural Sensitivity Workshops
814-452-3935
info@uscree-erie.org

USCRI Erie's cultural sensitivity workshops enhance the network of public and private partners, residents and organizations wanting to appropriately serve and empower New Americans in Erie. We develop specialized workshops with community organizations that promote cultural humility, cross-cultural interaction, and curiosity and collaboration with diverse residents. These workshops are tailored to the specific needs and goals of the organizations, which include employers, educators, and social service providers.
